

Area Highlights

Pacific Palisades Conservation Area is a 695-acre tract in Jefferson and St. Louis counties immediately east of Pacific and three miles from Interstate 44. Three miles of lower Meramec River frontage make this a popular spot for anglers to catch bass, crappie, bluegill and non-game fish. There are two abandoned gravel pits that are connected to the Meramec River during times of high water. The gravel pits are not stocked and are not managed. The area is about 65 percent forested and has 150 acres in fields. Birdwatchers may search woodlands, open land or edge for a variety of avian visitors. Squirrels, quail, rabbits, deer, turkey and furbearers also find food and cover at Pacific Palisades, making this area attractive to hunters.
